Millionaire's ex-wife in 'landmark' court case

■ NATALIE ROBINSON

A COURT case during which the ex-wife of a millionaire vet from Newmarket was told to "just get on with it" and "get a job" by the judge as she tried to stop cuts to her maintenance payments has national significance, the case solicitor has said.

Tracey Wright went to the Court of Appeal to stop her ex-husband, Ian Wright, making an application to cut spousal payments to her.

Mr Wright applied to stop the £33,200 payments to Mrs Wright over five or six years, but would continue to provide the £41,800 for his children's school fees.

And while Mrs Wright argued that losing the £33,000 would cause a "plummeting standard of living", Judge Lynn Richards told her last year that she should "just get on with it", a view shared by Lord Justice Pitchford at the Court of Appeal.

Matt Clemence, head of family law at Newmarket firm Edmondson Hall, in Exeter Road, represented Mr Wright and believed this would change rulings on cases in the future.

Mr Clemence told the News:

"The Lord Justice Pitchford in the Court of Appeal suggested it starts a general principle that there is now an expectation that a spouse in receipt of the money cannot rely on it for life.

"Where spouses have the skills and are able to work, there is an expectation on that party to find work in time.

"This case sets a precedent and is a judgement to be welcomed across the family law profession. It is a significant change in how lawyers should approach marital claims."

He continued: "This is a case that will be relied upon that will affirm decisions. There seems to be a change of stance and it seems the Court of Appeal said that spouses who are able to work, and when their children reach year two, there will be an expectation for them to be financially independent."

He added: "Ian has been trying to negotiate and resolve this matter without it damaging their children. There was no euphoria when it was over. He hopes this matter is now closed and Tracey can accept the decision."

Man arrested after altercation

A MAN suffered a broken nose and suspected fractured cheek bone after an "altercation" in Newmarket last week.

Two men, both aged in their 20s, were involved in an incident close to Costcutters on Exning Road between 5.30pm and 6pm on Friday, February 20.

One man reported being struck in the face and had a broken nose and suspected fractured cheek bone.

A 24-year-old man from Newmarket has been arrested on suspicion of assault and released on bail until April 14.

Police are appealing for witnesses following the incident.

Call Pc Dave Edwards at Bury St Edmunds PIC on 101 quoting NE/15/307.

Council approves safeguard moves

THE district council has approved plans which will allow it to safeguard and potentially buy the Queensbury Lodge site.

The decision of Forest Heath District Council means that action must be taken on the site within the next two months after the cabinet approved an urgent works and repairs notice.

These notices require the owner of the site, Bill Gredley, to make repairs necessary to preserve the listed building.

If the repairs are not made within two months, the council would be able to issue a compulsory purchase order to buy the site.

Cllr Rona Burt said: "We are determined to bring about the transformation of these dilapidated buildings at this historic gateway into Newmarket. We would like to achieve this by working with the owner. If this is not possible, however, the council is unfaltering in its conviction that we will take the necessary action ourselves, to deliver the best for the people of Newmarket."

Women jailed for robbery

■ JULIAN MAKEY

TWO women, one from Newmarket, have been jailed and a third received a suspended sentence after a robbery in which the victim was allegedly beaten with a golf club.

Jane Lander, 49, who had 38 previous convictions involving 77 offences, was also convicted of intimidating a witness after she made threats against the victim at an earlier court hearing.

Cambridge Crown Court heard the victim had lost confidence after the incident and had moved away from the area.

Jane Lander, of St Catharine's Square, Cambridge, was jailed for a total of six years for the robbery and intimidating the witness and received concurrent sentences for attempting to smuggle drugs to her son, who was in custody. Two suspended sentences for theft were also activated.

Sadie Fuller, 29, of St Anthony, Newmarket, was jailed for three years for the robbery and had earlier been cleared of intimidation.

Ceri Lander, 27, of The Grove, Cambridge, was given a two-year suspended sentence for robbery. She was also ordered to carry out 200 hours of unpaid work, was put on a curfew, given 12 months' supervision and told to take part in a women's emotional well-being programme.

They had denied the charges but were convicted after a trial.

The court heard that the victim had visited Ceri Lander's home in August 2013 but the meeting turned nasty when others arrived and she was allegedly assaulted with a golf club and had property, including a handbag and a post office card, taken.

At a later court hearing Jane Lander and Fuller were said to have threatened the victim, saying she was a "dead woman walking."

The two women had denied being present at the robbery and Ceri Lander said she had been present but had not taken part.

Charles Kellett, prosecuting, said Jane Lander had also admitted two offences of attempting to supply her son, an inmate at Peterborough prison, with a heroin substitute and cannabis. She was also in breach of two prison sentences for shoplifting.

Raj Joshi, for Jane Lander, said she felt strongly that her involvement in the incident had not happened in the way the court had heard.

He said Lander, who had a long history of drink and drug use, was acting as a "misguided" mother when she tried to supply her son with drugs.

Jonathan Masters, for Fuller, said the robbery was unplanned and followed an argument.

He said the sadness was that Fuller had committed the offence after 12 months of successfully putting her life back together.

Charles Snelling, for Ceri Lander, said she only had a peripheral role in what happened and lacked previous convictions.

PM drops by to watch the horses and smell the roses

■ NATALIE ROBINSON

PRIME Minister David Cameron joined top trainers and horses on Newmarket Heath on Friday morning in a private visit during which he spoke about the "success story" of British racing.

The Prime Minister said that the racing industry in Newmarket was going "from strength to strength" and hailed it as one of the country's "national successes".

He said: "British racing is a massive success story and I wanted to come and see and hear about it for myself."

"It is an industry worth over £3 billion, employs well over 100,000 people and it's the most popular sport after football in our country."

"One of the themes of what I have been talking about is how we need to play to our national successes. This is a success story too and we want to make sure it's continued."

"I'm meeting with some trainers and others and hearing their views about how we make sure this great industry, a lot of it based here in Newmarket, goes from strength to strength."

West Suffolk MP Matthew Hancock also joined the PM on Warren Hill.

Mr Hancock said: "I was able to show off just how brilliant Newmarket is. We welcomed the Prime Minister to Warren Hill to watch some of the world's best racehorses in training. We met with local trainers to find out what more we can do to make British horseracing an even greater success story."

"Newmarket is the international birthplace and home of horseracing, providing around 9,000 jobs locally. And that is precisely why I am a great supporter of the industry and doing all we can to better it."

The PM also joined Matthew Hancock on a tour of the town, and stopped off at Tolly's Flowers.

The two visited the shop in Rous Road as part of Mr Hancock's '100 businesses in 100 days' initiative.

Owner Tolly Considine said: "We had a call from Downing Street on the Thursday requesting for the Prime Minister to visit. I was very honoured and delighted to say yes."

"I informed him about what we do here. I told him about what was happening in Newmarket and filled him in on the seven empty shops scheme we did a few years ago that opened The Pantry and the fish shop.

"I told him about how wonderful it is that Newmarket has a group of people from the town council, district council, retailers and people from the racing industry who get together to discuss where we are going to."

"We have lots to look forward to with the museum and the High Street sculptures."

"We had a very positive, happy meeting and I am very honoured he came to visit us."

He added: "I am very honoured and thrilled for myself and for my business and for Newmarket that the PM saw fit to come and support Newmarket and the racing industry, which is very valuable for the area, and to support businesses in Newmar-

The Prime Minister spent about 20 minutes at the shop – but declined to take up Tolly's offer of flowers to take home.

"We did discuss whether he would like to take some flowers," Tolly said, "but he said that Mrs Cameron was away with the children for half term so he didn't take me up on the offer!"

Mr Hancock added: "Tolly's Flowers is a fantastic example of a local business serving local people under the brilliant leadership of head designer Tolly Considine."

"It is my mission in government to make starting and growing a business easier so it is vital to my work that I meet businesses like Tolly's, hear their stories and find out how the government's policies are playing out on the ground."

Main road set to be renamed

BARBARA Stradbroke Avenue is set to be renamed as part of celebrations for the Queen's 90th birthday next year.

The road, which was just an avenue of trees, is often confused with the main A road into Newmarket as motorists approach the "rearing horse roundabout".

The avenue of trees will remain Barbara Stradbroke Avenue, but the A1304 will be renamed Queen Elizabeth II Avenue under the plans.

Grant withdrawn for sports group

COUNCILLORS have voted to axe a £2,000 grant for a Newmarket sports group in the 2015/16 budget.

Cllr Michael Jefferys was angry at the move to remove the grant for the Street Sports group, held at the Leisure Centre, which is open to young people on Friday evenings.

He said: "I am perplexed that when we do so little for young people in the town that we would get rid of this grant that costs no staff time for us."

However, Cllr Dave Hudson pledged to provide the same amount to the group in his locality budget so that it could continue as it had.

Millionaire's former wife told by judge 'to get a job'

■ COURT REPORTER

A JUDGE has slammed the ex-wife of a millionaire racehorse surgeon, saying she has no right to be "supported for life" at his expense.

Tracey Susan Wright, 51, chose not to be a working mum when she split up with equine surgeon Ian Malcolm Wright in 2008.

After 11 years of marriage, the couple's £1.3m, seven-bedroom home, in 16 acres of countryside, was ordered to be sold and the proceeds split.

Mrs Wright came away with a £450,000, mortgage-free, house in Newmarket plus stabling for her horse and her daughters' ponies.

Her ex-husband was also ordered to pay her and the two children £75,000 a year in maintenance and school fees.

Last year Mr Wright, 59, protested it was not fair that he be expected to keep supporting his ex-wife indefinitely, whilst she made "no effort whatsoever to seek work."

The Court of Appeal has now rejected her challenge to the decision to slash her future maintenance.

As part of the divorce, Mrs Wright, who lives with her youngest daughter, 10, was handed £75,000 yearly, £33,200 being spousal maintenance for personal upkeep.

Judge Lynn Roberts last year agreed there was no reason why Mrs Wright had not done any paid work in the six years since the divorce.

She said: "Vast numbers of women with children just get on with it and Mrs Wright should have done as well."

"I do not think the children will suffer if Mrs Wright has to work, and indeed a working mother at this stage of their lives may well provide them with a good role model."

"I reject her other reasons relating to responsibilities for animals, or trees, or house-keeping. Mrs Wright has made no effort whatsoever to seek work or to update her skills."

"It is essential . . . that she starts to work now."

The judge ordered maintenance payments from her ex-husband must cease, gradually tailing off over five years leading to his retirement.

Mark Johnston, for Mrs Wright, said caring for a 10-year-old, with their older daughter at boarding school, "is an inherent restriction on her ability to develop any kind of earning capacity in the next five years."

He warned the order would cause "a plummeting in the standard of living" of the youngest child.

Upholding Judge Roberts' ruling, Lord Justice Pitchford said it was "imperative" she worked. Lord Justice Pitchford said "the order was never intended to provide the wife with an income for life."

Woman jailed for supplying wraps of heroin in town

■ COURT REPORTER

A YOUNG woman who was caught delivering illegal drugs to Newmarket has been jailed.

Saffron Harley, 21, was arrested when police with a warrant searched an address in the High Street on June 26 last year.

On Friday, Ipswich Crown Court heard that Harley had admitted to officers that she was in possession of drugs "down below."

Prosecuting, Juliet Donovan said Harley then produced a golf-ball sized package from inside her underwear.

The package was found to contain 19 wraps of heroin and crack cocaine, ready for street dealing, said Miss Donovan.

Harley was arrested and admitted that she was at that time on bail for other offences.

A further 17 wraps of heroin were recovered by police during a search of the address.

Miss Donovan said that Harley had previously been arrested in connection with two offences of allowing her bank account to be used by fraudsters and the possession of Class A drugs with intent to supply in Bury St Edmunds.

Harley, formerly of Chedburgh and now living in Edmonton, London, pleaded guilty to three offences of possession of Class A drugs with intent to supply and two offences of money laundering.

Defending, Stephen Dyble said Harley had been "utterly used" by a man in an abusive relationship after a difficult start in life having spent time at a young age in a care home.

Mr Dyble said that Harley had travelled to Newmarket to deliver drugs on the orders of a dealer after she had lost another consignment when she was arrested by undercover police officers in Bury St Edmunds in May 2013.

Mr Dyble told the court: "She was under the influence of someone who was strong and dominant when she was, in effect, weak and helpless. She was almost like a puppet directed by someone else."

Although she had used Class A drugs in the past, Harley was now clean of them, said Mr Dyble.

He said that her involvement in drug supply had been due to coercion.

Harley was sentenced to 28 months in prison.

Mr Recorder Martyn Levett told her that by helping to distribute illegal drugs, she had been perpetuating "misery and crime" among users.

The inquest will be held at the Active Business Centre in Bury St Edmunds on March 30.

£30,000 raised

THREE hundred riders raised a huge £30,000 for Macmillan Cancer Support in a sponsored cycle ride last year.

The cyclists took to Newmarket Heath to raise the funds on August 31.

A spokesperson for the committee said: "The organisers would like to thank all who took part in the ride."

Have you seen missing man?

POLICE are asking for help in finding a 55-year-old man from Mildenhall.

Simon Collins was reported missing on Saturday after last being seen at home in Mildenhall on October 27 2014.

Mr Collins had been out of the country in Australia where he had been working but friends and family said they were concerned about his welfare after not hearing from him since October.

Police enquiries over the past two days have so far failed to locate him.

Mr Collins is white, 5ft 11in tall, of slim build, with long brown and greying hair. He was last seen when wearing a navy blue fleece, grey cargo trousers and a white T-shirt with Brazilian motifs.

He is also believed to have links to northern Scotland, particularly the isle of Handa and the area of Wester Alligin near Inveralligin.

Anyone who thinks they may have seen Mr Collins or has any information about his location should contact the duty sergeant at Mildenhall police station on 101.

Postal vote offer

WHEN Forest Heath District Council held a consultation recently on the suitability of existing polling stations, I tried very hard to change the awkward one at Paddocks School and to revert to the Scout Hut from the Memorial Hall which was more convenient for many of the St Mary's electors. I failed miserably and Paddocks and the Memorial Hall will be used in May. Paddocks may be reconsidered when the future use of the former Scaltback School is finally agreed. However, if, as a St Mary's voter, you do not wish to use either Paddocks or the Memorial Hall on election day, let me arrange a free postal vote for you. Just leave your address at bill@billsadler.co.uk or call 666117 and I will do the necessary. It matters particularly that you vote this time because you will be asked to choose one MP, three councillors to serve you on Forest Heath and as many as seven on the town council. Please vote. Remember, it is your money they are spending.

Homes issue

So now we know! Councillor Cole is a NIMBY. He won his seat on FHDC fighting against any new houses near his place in Exning. But he wants to flood Newmarket with houses on Hatchfield and probably elsewhere. Fortunately, or sadly, he lost the battle in Exning and 120 houses are on the way. If Mr Cole wants even more houses will he support the next planning application when the Bright new jackets bought for Rainbows

THE Newmarket Rainbows are shining bright thanks to new high-visibility jackets from a local councillor. Warwick Hirst, of the Severals ward in Newmarket, gave £100 of his locality money to the Rainbows group to get them safe and seen when they go out on trips.

The group, which includes girls aged from 5 to 7, decided they needed the jackets so they could be seen after a trip with other groups to Colchester Zoo.

Leader Diana Read said: "As well as improving the girls' safety, it will help us to easily spot our girls at future events. We try to go on a couple of trips each year, while we will also wear the jackets for some of our outdoor activities and walks."

No change

BEFORE folks get excited or irate, the FHDC cabinet meeting on Tuesday, February 17, was not D-Day for Queensbury Lodge. Despite the fine quotes in last week's paper by Councillors Hood and Hirst, nothing much has changed and won't do for a while; not before the town and district council elections, at least. Hopefully common sense may be more abundant after May 7. The most interesting comment, for me anyway, was that Unex have not received a response to their pre-application proposals sent some five months ago, allegedly because FHDC officers are too busy dealing with matters relating to the Hatchfield Farm call in. The latest Hatchfield inquiry is due to start on April 14; it may not be such popular viewing as Kylie or Madness but it is due to run for three weeks. Residents of Forest Heath should be quite interested in the proceedings – if only to watch your council taxes being spent.

FURTHER HIGHWAYS STRATEGY MEETING

Following the recent public meeting at the Jubilee Centre in Mildenhall, at which local residents put forward their own ideas of what the parish council should be considering in enhancing further its highways strategy, the council's special working party met again last Tuesday to consider the results. Many of the proposed ideas were similar to the ones which the working party had devised, based on members' own experiences within the town and the adjacent village areas. For example, several of those attending the Jubilee Centre meeting clearly supported the need for additional road crossings or changes to some of those already installed, together with improved signage and road markings. After discussion, the working party concluded that the best way to proceed was not to have an over ambitious shopping list to take forward but to concentrate on certain basic matters. In this way, it is hoped that during scheduled discussions in late March with county councillors, the Suffolk Constabulary and the Highways Department, there will be approval of ideas behind which everyone can line up as matters of urgency which will improve the locality.

LAST FORUM OF THIS YEAR

The village hall at Barton Mills, near Mildenhall, was the venue

last Wednesday evening, February 18, for another session of the "town & parish forum", arranged by officers of Forest Heath District Council (led by cabinet member Cllr Robin Millar), which has for some months been paying close attention to the planning regime utilised by the district council. The councillor-members, drawn from a good number of the towns and parishes in the district, have been working hard with the planning officers in an attempt to produce an agreed, legal, understandable and proper method of dealing with planning applications, on which it is the district council's duty to adjudicate, all in line with governmental directives. Last week's meeting was slightly out of the usual, in that the chairman had asked specifically for additional items to be on the agenda e.g. on the audience's views on the future closure of RAF Mildenhall; on the work of the rural Coffee Caravan; on the criteria for Locality Budget Funding, particularly for the smaller parishes in the district.

In addition, there were the customary town and parish updates on activities undertaken in their own localities. Mr. Millar, supported by several planning office staff, then finally produced a draft of the long-awaited "memorandum of understanding", which members – having discussed it in its constituent parts in recent months – will now take back to their councils and, hopefully, gain their comments and, if possible, their approval before the next meeting of this body.

Youngsters splash out at swimming gala

YOUNGSTERS from schools in Newmarket and Mildenhall made a splash at the Forest Heath Schools Sports Partnership's swimming festival.

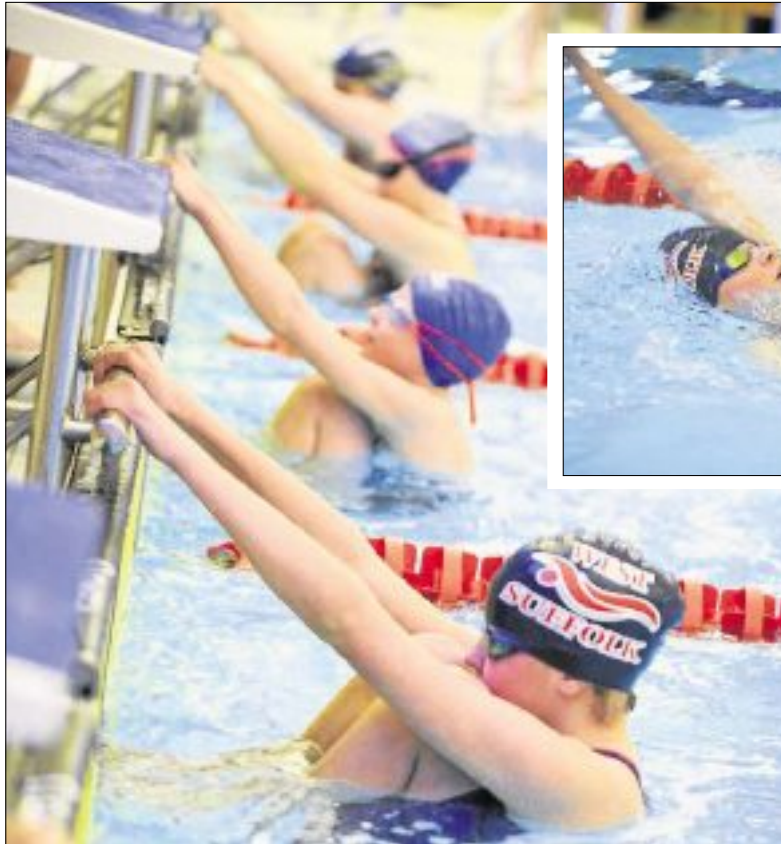

Held at Newmarket Leisure Centre, the event featured an under-13 open competition for swimmers of all abilities at secondary schools in West Suffolk; an under-11 open event for primary school swimmers who have competed at a county championship; and a development gala for inexperienced swimmers at primary schools.

The festival was organised by the partnership, Suffolk Amateur Swimming Association, Newmarket Swimming Club and leaders from Newmarket Academy.

Ditton Lodge won the closely-contested primary development gala, amassing 61 points. Runners-up St Louis finished with 58, while third-placed Exning had 52.

Both Ditton Lodge and St Louis will go on to represent Forest Heath at the Suffolk School Games in July.

The primary open gala was won by Cheveley with 24 points, ahead of Exning on 18 and Lakenheath in third.

Appeal after cyclist hurt in hit-and-run with motorcyclist

THE wife of a cyclist who was injured by a motorcyclist in a hit-and-run accident is appealing to anyone who witnessed the crash or knows anything about it to come forward.

Tracey Hart's husband Ian Bloomfield was cycling home from work at around 3pm on Tuesday, February 17, when he was in a collision with a motorcyclist.

Police and an ambulance attended the scene, on the B1506 near Kentford, and Mr Bloomfield, 54, was taken to Addenbrooke's Hospital.

It was initially thought that Mr Bloomfield might have a serious head injury, but doctors discovered that he was concussed and had severe bruising to his shoulder and arm. They believe he may also have fractured his elbow.

Ms Hart, 52, said when she saw her husband in hospital he was completely disoriented. "He didn't know who he was, he didn't know where he was," she said.

He went home, to Cotton End Road, Exning, after being discharged from hospital at around 10pm that evening.

He is unable to remember the accident. "He's black and blue," said Ms Hart. "The right side of his body looks like a truck's run over him. He can't lift his right hand."

Mr Bloomfield's injuries mean he cannot return to his job as a maintenance man at Lanwades Stud until he has fully recovered.

Ms Hart is hoping the motorcyclist, or someone who knows about the incident, will come forward. "It's the thought that someone just left him there," she said. "I just can't believe it."

Anyone who saw the crash happen or has any information about the incident should call Suffolk Police on 101, quoting CAD 271 of Tuesday, February 17.

Hope for users of dial-a-ride

■ JORDAN DAY

TWO charity organisations are "hopeful" that they will be able to set up a replacement dial-a-ride service.

The Fenland Association for Community Transport (FACT) and The Voluntary Network in Newmarket say they are in discussions about what community transport services they could provide in East Cambridgeshire after Ely Soham Dial-a-Ride folds at the end of March.

A majority vote at the charity's AGM on February 17 was to wind the organisation up and to transfer the service to FACT and The Voluntary Network, which run similar community transport services in their areas.

The decision has proved controversial among users and staff at the charity, which has been running for 12 years, and the trustees have been accused of not allowing members to have enough say.

But speaking last week, Ruth Rogers, its chair, insisted the decision was a "majority vote by members". She added: "It's very sad. I feel for the members and staff."

'VERY SAD': Councillors Gareth and Pauline Wilson

"Sadly, I think it is inevitable that some staff will lose their jobs but I am confident that the Fenland Association for Community Transport and The Voluntary Network in Newmarket will work together to provide a similar service to Dial-a-Ride in the Ely area."

District councillors Gareth and Pauline Wilson, who represent Haddenham ward, have been campaigning for more funding for Dial-a-Ride for years, and say they are "very sad" that the charity will be closing.

However, Mr Wilson has been elected onto the board of trustees and Mrs Wilson said: "Gareth wants to make sure that the transfer of the service is carried out properly and that our vulnerable adults are not left high and dry without any transport, and confined to staying home every day for the rest of their lives."

Caroline Robinson, manager of The Voluntary Network in Newmarket, said: "We are now in discussions with FACT about the future of dial-a-ride services in the Ely area."

"We operate a similar service in our areas so I am hopeful we will be able to provide similar to what Ely Soham Dial-a-Ride did."

Speaking about the decision to close the charity, Mr Wilson said: "It was a very sad day, but although we have lost the organisation we have hopefully saved the service."

WINNERS: Andy, Taylor, Levi and Janine took on The Dare Devil on CBBC

Family of four take on CBBC's Dare Devil

■ NATALIE ROBINSON

A FAMILY became stars of CBBC last week and watched themselves channelling their daring side.

Janine, Andy, Taylor and Levi Polley went head-to-head on The Dare Devil on CBBC last Wednesday, competing in a number of challenges, including one at Burwell Mill, to see if they could beat him.

Janine, who lives with her family in Linton, said: "We applied for the programme about two years ago but Levi was too young. This year we were accepted."

"We did the original filming last September and October and we had been sworn to secrecy over the results."

Embarrassing challenges awaited the adults – Janine busked in Cambridge dressed as a goblin using a kazoo, and Andy had to examine animal poo at Shepreth Wildlife Park.

Meanwhile, uncle Tristan Nunn took to Burwell Mill, where he had to get from the top to the bottom while wearing a bowl on his head.

If he managed to get from the top to the bottom with a kilo of flour still in the bowl, he'd win time for the boys to complete their trial at a castle in Preston.

Taylor and Levi then braved three terrifying challenges. They first had to play music – plunging their hands into tanks of rats and snakes to match the tune.

The animal theme continued as Levi shared a tank with giant locusts to crack a code with Taylor.

Their final challenge involved darkness – with Levi searching a pitch black room for the treasure – and although he wasn't alone, the Polley family managed to bring home the medals and win.

Janine added: "They both won their medals and for 24 hours were the only people to have them – but they were sworn to secrecy.

"They were desperate to get back to school last week so that they could go in and show them off."

She said: "They both worked really well as a team and kept encouraging each other."

"Even when the cameras were off they were giving each other tips."

"The whole experience was just so fantastic and the children learned an awful lot as well."

US crash pilot radioed: 'Dude, I'm getting out'

NEWS REPORTER

A PILOT who ejected from a US fighter jet moments before it smashed to the ground radioed a colleague to say "Dude, I'm getting out".

The pilot plunged from 6,000ft before the F15-D jet from RAF Lakenheath crashed into a field near Spalding in Lincolnshire last October as it was returning to its Suffolk base.

Fortunately the US pilot ejected from the plane safely before the accident, which occurred close to a primary school.

US Department of Defense documents reveal the £28.6 million jet went into a flat spin at 15,000ft above sea level.

A technical sergeant, who was sitting in the back seat of another jet, said he was left "very shaken".

In transcripts of an interview he gave investigators, he said: "After 6,000ft, number 2 [the pilot from the crashed jet] basically said 'Dude, I'm getting out'."

The information was revealed in documents released after a Freedom of Information request.

Residents nearby had to be evacuated and children who attended the local primary school received bravery awards following the incident on October 8.

A cordon was put in place by police and the public were told to avoid the area because when it first crashed, the plane was alight and there were fears the fumes could be hazardous.

CRASH SCENE: The RAF Lakenheath pilot ejected from the F15-D jet before it hit the ground

At the time, the 48th Fighter Wing tweeted: "We can confirm that one of our jets went down north of the base in Lincolnshire. The pilot ejected and is safe."

"We are very relieved that the pilot was able to eject. Our pilots train for every emergency to mitigate damage and injury. We hope they never have to use it but we're glad they have it."

An Accident Investigation Board report into the crash is yet to be released.

The MoD's clean-up bill was revealed to be £393,235. The USAF will cover 75 per cent of the cost.

The pilot, who had been on a training exercise at the time with two aircraft, escaped the accident with minor injuries.

Town councillors pay silent tribute to former mayor

A MINUTE'S silence was held in memory of Cllr Geoffrey Jaggard at Monday evening's Newmarket Town Council meeting.

The popular councillor was remembered by members, with town mayor Rachel Hood saying he was "greatly respected" by the group.

Cllr Michael

Jefferys said: "Cllr Jaggard joined this council in 1999 with its inception."

"He was a mayor twice during that period."

"He had honour and integrity throughout his time as a councillor both in Forest Heath and on this town council."

Cllr Jaggard's funeral was held yesterday.

Delays after lorry crashes on A14

THERE were rush hour delays yesterday morning after a crash between a lorry and a tractor on the A14 near Newmarket.

The lorry reportedly crashed into the back of the tractor on the eastbound carriageway at junction 37 for Exning, which closed three lanes – two on the eastbound side and one lane westbound.

Traffic queued back to junction 40 for Kentford and police were on scene while the vehicles were recovered.

Earlier on in the morning, a lorry jackknifed on the carriageway.

Callum to cycle the globe

INSPIRATIONAL fundraiser Callum Fairhurst is gearing up for his biggest and most testing challenge to date – a cycle ride around the world.

Callum, 17, has announced that he is going to be cycling across the globe this summer in memory of his brother, Liam.

Liam was just 10 years old when he was diagnosed with cancer. He sadly lost his battle with the disease in 2009, but during that time he raised a staggering £340,000 for children's cancer charities.

Not long after his death, the Fairhurst family, from Soham, launched the Liam Fairhurst Foundation, which supports young people in the UK affected by cancer, disabilities and illnesses.

Callum, a former Soham Village College pupil who is now studying A-levels at Long Road Sixth Form College in Cambridge, has raised thousands of pounds for the foundation by doing everything from skydives to rowing challenges.

But in July, a couple of days after he has finished his exams, he will be flying out to Australia to embark on the experience of a lifetime.

Callum, who is calling the challenge the 'World Cycle', said: "I'm going to be cycling around 18,000 miles and hope to achieve that within eight months, although that might be a bit ambitious.

"I'm going to start in Australia and basically cycle the world. I'll be going to New Zealand, Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand, the whole of Europe and then Canada and the United States.

"A couple of people will be joining me for certain parts of the ride but we'll have no back-up vehicles or anything – it'll be just us, our bikes and whatever we need to survive.

"I first thought of this idea after reading about someone equally as silly scaling the world in search of an incredible adventure, whilst trying to break the world record. A few years later the world cycle record stands at something unbelievably ridiculous, so I'm not trying to beat that."

Callum is hoping to raise at least £100,000. The money will go to the Liam Fairhurst Foundation and numerous charities that help people in the countries he will be visiting, including Free The Children in India.

He said: "Liam inspired me and on Thursday he would have celebrated his 20th birthday.

"In his final moments I made a promise to him that I would live a brilliant life and try to help others whilst doing it. This challenge is ticking both of those boxes."

People or businesses who would like to sponsor Callum should visit www.justgiving.com/worldcycle.

For information about the cycle ride or to get involved, visit www.callumfairhurst.com.

NHS trust put into special measures

■ DEBRA FOX

AN "INADEQUATE" health trust has been placed into special measures.

The NHS Foundation Trust covering both Suffolk and Norfolk was found to have "serious problems" in an inspection towards the end of 2014 – and now work will begin immediately to improve services.

Monitor, the regulator for health services in England, made the decision last week.

It will "attach" an improvement director to the trust and set a number of other procedures in motion.

The Care Quality Commission rated the trust "inadequate" in its report following an inspection in October, and suggested that special measures may be necessary.

Michael Scott, chief executive of the Norfolk and Suffolk NHS Foundation Trust, said: "Although disappointing, it is not a surprise to us, coming as it does after the CQC's recommendations made in January."

"But as we made clear then, we recognise we need to improve the care we provide and we need to carefully manage our finances to a healthier position."

Being placed in special measures means that the trust will be buddied with another NHS trust, and that a quality improvement plan will be developed for it to follow.

Mr Scott welcomed the "additional support" being provided to the trust, and also added that "every single member of staff" will play their part in the improvement.

BRIGHT IDEA: Rosemary Davenport outside the centre

Community centre cuts running costs

A CHARITY-run community centre near Newmarket has gone eco friendly by installing solar panels.

The Ellesmere Centre in Stetchworth has spent £17,000 on the panels to provide electricity, thanks to a grant from waste management company Amey Cespa.

Another £1,800 was spent on repairs to the roof.

The centre had to match fund 10 per cent of the grant, which was generously donated by a local centre user.

Rosemary Davenport, treasurer to the trustees, said: "The decrease in electricity costs will make a huge difference to the future sustainability of the centre and ensures the continuation of this fantastic educational, leisure and sporting facility for our widespread rural community."

Roy Swain, trustees chairman, added: "The project is a tribute to our very small band of fundraisers, without whose efforts this would not have happened."

Jobseekers to find help at sixth fair

A JOBS fair will be held in Newmarket next month for local businesses and people looking for a career change.

West Suffolk MP Matthew Hancock will be holding the fair on Friday, March 20, at Newmarket Academy.

Mr Hancock said: "I am thrilled to be holding my sixth jobs fair in West Suffolk. I am proud that unemployment continues to fall and that we now have a record number of people in work."

"But while there are any unemployed people in West Suffolk, we must work hard to support them in getting the jobs and skills they need."

A morning of seminars will be held at the event which will cover CV writing, preparing for interviews, and tips on finding jobs and apprenticeships in the local area.

Local businesses will also be on hand to help jobseekers secure a career or apprenticeship at the fair.

Mr Hancock added: "My jobs and apprenticeships fair is a great opportunity for anyone looking for work, a career change or for training and education opportunities to come along and see what is on offer."

The jobs fair will be held between 10am and 12.30pm.

Animal trust puts focus on cancer

■ NATALIE ROBINSON

RESEARCH at an animal trust near Newmarket could change the way cancer is discovered and treated in dogs.

The Animal Health Trust (AHT) at Kentford is carrying out research on how best to diagnose and treat cancer in dogs, with scientists evaluating how biopsies can be changed in the future.

The Kennel Club Cancer Centre, on the AHT site, is able to offer surgery, chemotherapy and radiotherapy for pets all in one place.

So far, more than 130 dogs from 20 breeds with 15 types of cancer have been treated at the Kennel Club Cancer Centre since it opened in 2012.

The current study is looking at uveal melanomas – the most common eye cancer in dogs that currently means their eyes are removed for testing, even if they may not have the disease.

New research hopes to put an end to having to have the eye removed, and instead may mean other ways of diagnosis are found.

Professor Steve Dean, Kennel Club chairman, said: "The number of dogs already helped by the centre is extremely encouraging and we look forward to further strides it is taking in terms of researching and treating cancer in dogs."

The centre was opened earlier than planned thanks to a £1.5 million loan from the Kennel Club.

Prof Dean added: "The Kennel Club Cancer Centre at the Animal Health Trust carries out remarkable work to benefit dog health and we are glad we were able to assist by providing the loan."

Housing group in the running for top award

THE owners of a housing development in Mildenhall have reached the finals of a prestigious industry award.

Havebury Housing Partnership is in the running for the outstanding development of the year of up to 24 homes award for the development in Mill Street.

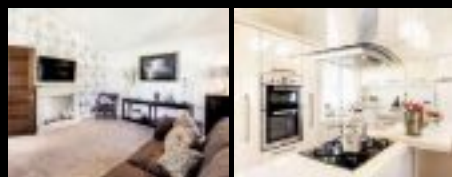

The awards, which are organised by the Chartered Institute of Housing and Inside Housing, are to "pinpoint excellence and reward innovation", attracting more than 250 entries from around the UK.

The Mill Street development saw Havebury revamp a former builders merchant shop and yard in the town centre which had been derelict for 10 years. The conversion of the listed buildings into new homes – two cottages, a maisonette, a flat and a house – led to them reaching the award finals.

Paul Edwards, director of resources at Havebury, said: "We are delighted this development has been shortlisted for a UK Housing Award and we look forward to meeting the judges as we move towards this final stage."

Man is sent to jail for attack

■ COURT REPORTER

AN attacker who left his victim with a broken jaw following an incident in Newmarket town centre has been jailed.

Steven Lambert, 24, lashed out as Glenn Bannister tried to calm an argument between him and another man, Ipswich Crown Court was told.

Mr Bannister, who had been waiting with Lambert for a taxi in the High Street in the early hours of August 1 last year, was struck in the face when he touched Lambert on the elbow during an attempt to defuse the situation, said Godfried Duah, prosecuting.

The court heard that Mr Bannister was knocked to the ground by the blow and Alex Vellar, the man with whom Lambert had been arguing, was also punched by Lambert and stumbled backwards.

Police were alerted after the incident was witnessed on Newmarket's CCTV system.

Mr Duah said that as Lambert left the scene, Mr Bannister followed asking why he had been punched and was again attacked.

The attacks left Mr Bannister suffering from fractures to his jaw and chin. He later underwent surgery to insert a metal plate and to have his jaw wired.

Mr Duah said that a serious brain injury incurred by Mr Bannister while playing rugby had left him vulnerable.

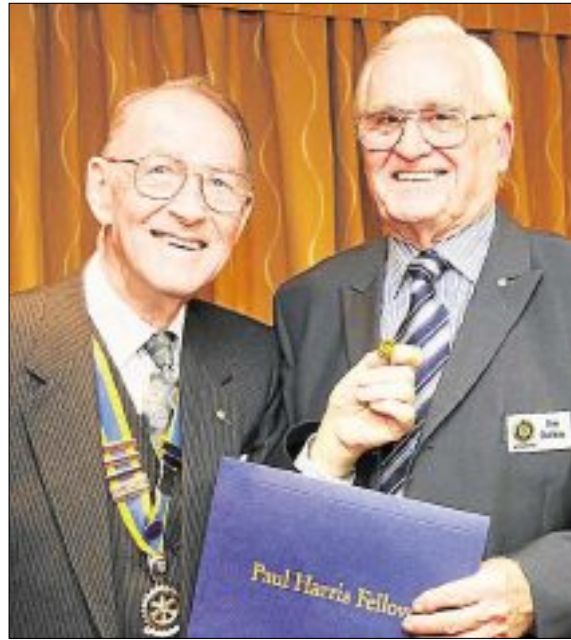

Lambert, of Pinza Close, Newmarket, was jailed for a total of 18 months. He had pleaded guilty to assault causing grievous bodily harm, assault and possession of ecstasy.

Judge John Devaux told Lambert that the offences were so serious that only an immediate prison sentence was appropriate.

In mitigation, Lindsay Cox said Lambert's judgement may have been clouded because he had been drinking.

Lambert, who had expressed remorse, was "very ashamed" of the way he had behaved, said Mr Cox.

Rotarian presented with top award

AWARD: Rons Dubbins receives the Paul Harris Fellowship from current Rotary president Richard Bennett

A ROTARIAN has been given an award for his services to the community.

Ron Dubbins, last year's president of the Rotary Club of Newmarket, has received top Rotary honour the Paul Harris Fellowship.

The insignia and certificate were presented at a recent club meeting by the current president of the Rotary Club of Newmarket, Richard Bennett.

The fellowship is named after the founder of the Rotary Club, Paul Harris. The award was given to Mr Dubbins for the community work he has done throughout the 32 years he has been a member of the Rotary Club.

Mr Dubbins, who lives in Swaffham Bulbeck, was a member of the Rotary Club at Soham and Saffron Walden before joining the Newmarket branch.

The Fox celebrates 10 successful years

LAST weekend a very special local pub celebrated a very special anniversary.

The Fox, in Burwell, was the location for the celebrations. And owner Bob Taylor, who has been running the pub and restaurant with wife Louise for 10 years, can't quite believe it.

"I find it quite amazing really," he told us. "It seems like a lifetime ago, and yet it still seems like just yesterday."

In their time at the pub, in the lovely village with a thriving community, the Taylors have introduced some great innovations. Transforming the pub from the run-of-the-mill free house that it was a decade ago before their arrival, they introduced a delicious Mexican menu, inspired by their own love of tequila (a love reflected in the incredible selection of about 40 tequilas to choose from at The Fox!).

Their ethos is one in which authenticity is prime. Working with genuine Mexican recipes, each dish is crafted with the freshest of ingredients, all locally sourced where possible.

Quite simply, this is food of the highest possible quality.

So fans of The Fox's approach to cuisine were delighted when, last year, the Taylors took over the management of their neighbouring Indian restaurant. The Bengal Fox, as it has been renamed, reflects the same ethos, taking traditional Bangladeshi tandoori cuisine and transforming it into delicious and healthy dining, once again focusing on the excellent quality of the ingredients, using fresh meat, for example, as well as low fat, low salt dishes with no colourings or preservatives.

So how has the last 10 years been, for this enterprising and hard-working young family (the Taylors – childfree when they moved to Burwell – now have a three year old boy and a baby that was born just 10 weeks ago)?

Bob stresses that the support of the local community has "meant a lot to us" in their years at the pub. With great support from the village, they have become very much a part of the community, running annual events like the popular August beer festival, as well as work for local charities.

They also contribute to the community in other ways. The combined businesses now employ about 28 people locally, and having been in the location so long, they still get people who first worked with them as teenagers popping back to help out from time to time. As Bob says: "It's nice to watch people grow."

And what of the future? Well, with a warm and friendly village pub, great Mexican diner and now a delicious Indian establishment in their capable hands, it's likely Burwell's villagers are hoping that they will stay just where they are for – who knows? – another decade at least.

The Fox in Burwell and the Bengal Fox are at 2, North Street, Burwell, CB25 0BA. Telephone (01638) 741267 for The Fox, or (01638) 605559 for The Bengal Fox. Visit the websites at thefoxburwell.co.uk and bengalfox.co.uk for more.

'The world mustn't be complacent about

The past year Paulina Johnson has watched on, helpless, as the Ebola epidemic has ravaged her home country of Sierra Leone, leaving horror, despair and death in its wake. As the body count continues to rise, the mum of four tells Lydia Fallon why "we must not forget."

EBOLA. One word. Five letters. A synonym for such unfathomable horror.

We've all seen the news bulletins; stared at TV screens open-mouthed as this merciless disease sweeps through West Africa, leaving a deadly legacy. Men, women, children: Ebola stops for no one. It ruins lives, tears apart families, and leaves whole countries in ruin.

Anyone with a heart couldn't help but be shocked by the plight of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone, but, when it's your own country facing up to such devastation, your family facing infection, the fear is incomprehensible; the anger constant. As Paulina Johnson, a proud Sierra Leonean now living in Cambourne, describes. "When I think of Ebola it makes me feel sad, helpless, and sometimes angry. It's merciless and it's cruel," the 46-year-old says, a sense of foreboding in her words.

"The saddest thing is when you see a child dying of Ebola, and when they die, the parents aren't even allowed to hold them. I recall when my premature baby daughter died, I was given time with her... I can't even imagine the psychological effects of what they are going through."

The Ebola outbreak began in a tiny village in Guinea in December 2013, with the death of a two-year-old boy called Emile who was suffering from diarrhoea and fever, and rapidly became the deadliest occurrence of the disease since its discovery in 1976. As of January 31, 8,936 people have already lost their lives, a figure which continues to rise as each day goes by.

Sierra Leone has been one of the worst hit of the West African nations, and Paulina's family, many of whom live in the capital Freetown, tell of a country falling apart at the seams: food and living prices have quadrupled, schools and workplaces have locked their doors and crime is rife.

Paulina has been sending money to help, but is fearful of what the future holds. "I worry that my nieces and nephews will go off the rails with nothing to do. My nephew was robbed in a taxi and many young people are now getting into crime. I've had to think of alternatives for them, putting them into computer school, sending pocket money just to keep them occupied," she explains.

"It's hard to understand where the hate is coming from; it's not the Sierra Leone we knew. Our doors are always open; if we're sitting on the veranda someone will just walk in and say: 'What have you got to drink?' But now everyone has to lock their doors.

"When you meet a Sierra Leonean, the first thing we do when saying hello is to open our arms to embrace. That's why Sierra Leone is known in West Africa as the friendliest country. Now people are afraid to even hug someone."

One part of the problem is awareness. The Sierra Leoneans, Paulina explains, are renowned for their laid-back attitude, and it's taken a while for the enormity of the Ebola crisis to hit home.

"Initially my nephew didn't take it seriously 'Oh Ebola it's not for us, it's for the people in the slums,' and I had to tell them 'No guys, Ebola doesn't pick; it's here and it kills.'"

"They have the attitude 'Oh well, let's get on with it' but I think that's starting to change, we're getting there slowly."

Thankfully, none of Paulina's family has contracted Ebola, but the outbreak did mean she was unable to fly to Sierra Leone for her 94-year-old mother's funeral. "It was heartbreaking," says Paulina, simply. "We knew she was nearing death but we really didn't want her to die then because we wanted to go back to celebrate her life and we knew we couldn't. I never imagined I wouldn't even be at my own mum's funeral. It really knocked me for six."

A devout Christian, it has, she admits, tested her faith at times. "There are times when I feel annoyed with God, because I keep thinking why? Sierra Leone is such a poor country anyway, and then for something like this to happen. But then, at the same time, I think 'Why did He save me?' In doing all this He was saving me in one way or another."

On those darkest of days, Paulina has found comfort in her work for the Oakington-based charity CBM UK, which works to transform the lives of people with disabilities in the world's poorest countries.

She started volunteering for the charity when she first moved to Cambridge, and is now a data officer there, generating weekly reports and seeing first-hand how important their work is.

"One of the attractions for me working with CBM is that indirectly I'm helping people in Africa," Paulina says. "They've been in Sierra Leone since 1980, and I know that they'll be there for the future too. Sometimes charities go to Africa, start something, go home and then it all collapses, but that's not the case with CBM."

The charity launched its Ebola Emergency Appeal last October, and has raised over £25,000 so far and counting. In a crisis situation, those with disabilities can miss out on vital information that will protect them; CBM is dedicated to providing help and support to ensure that's not the case. From posters and leaflets in braille, to mental health awareness programmes in vulnerable communities; they've introduced a number of measures to ensure no one is forgotten. "I see the fundraising total rise and think 'Yes! We're getting what we need,' says Paulina. "I know getting that money over there will help a whole lot; you can't imagine how many people it's going to help, and it feels good to be part of that."

Paulina was born on the small island of Bonte near Sierra Leone, but grew up in the capital Freetown. She describes a "beautiful, cosmopolitan country, rich with lush greenery, stunning beaches, and friendly people."

But that all changed when the civil war broke out in 1994. A brutal, bloody war, it raged on for 10 long years. "It was one of the worst wars; there were people chopping off hands – they'd ask if you wanted short sleeves or long sleeves, and sometimes, if they saw a pregnant woman they'd flip a coin and say 'Boy or girl', and then cut open the woman's tummy."

"The most shocking memory I have was when I saw a rebel's head on a stick. It was one of the most dreadful things I've ever seen."

Paulina left Sierra Leone in 1997 to join her husband in Cambridge. It was a tough decision, but the right one, she says, given the rebels took Freetown only a week later. "I don't know where all the hatred came from, we have such a friendly character, but nobody trusted each other during the civil war," she says.

Sierra Leone finally emerged from a decade of war in 2002, and has been making major steps towards reconciliation, something which makes the Ebola outbreak even harder to swallow.

"People were getting their lives back together before Ebola; things were picking up," Paulina says. "After the civil war, the government were asking everyone to come back and help rebuild the country, and a lot of people did, but most of them left again after Ebola."

"It's really sad," she sighs. But there are grounds for optimism. In January Sierra Leone recorded the lowest weekly total of confirmed Ebola cases since August, and there are positive signs a cure could soon be found.

Paulina hopes this will be the case, but remains cautious about what lies ahead. "What happens after Ebola?" she wonders. "What happens when all the help moves out? I worry it's not going to get any better."

"Yes there's a decline in case load but there're still new infections, so the struggle continues. The world must not become complacent about Ebola."

Paulina hopes by sharing her story she will make people realise that West Africa's plight cannot be forgotten. "This is my small way of contributing to the Ebola awareness, making people realise it is still there. There's not so much in the news now, and this is sad because people are still dying, and we can't just sit back and watch it happen," she concludes.

"My wish is to see Sierra Leone back to the care-free, lovely, friendly country it is."

Tribute to Floyd

ON STAGE: The Australian Pink Floyd Show

THOSE expert Antipodean purveyors of excellent Pink Floyd music – The Australian Pink Floyd Show (TAPFS) – are undertaking their annual tour of Britain, including a stop at Cambridge Corn Exchange.

This year's tour is called 'Welcome to the Machine' which alludes to a track off their follow-up album to Dark Side of the Moon – Wish You Were Here, which is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year.

In the past, the Aussie tribute band has performed the Floyd's 1973 magnum opus in its entirety, and this time, it's the turn of Wish You Were Here, famous for the track, Shine On You Crazy Diamond, Floyd's tribute to their founder, Cambridge legend Syd Barrett.

On release in 1975, Wish shot straight to the top of the UK album chart (something Dark Side didn't quite manage).

Some people at the time thought the album was only successful on the coattails of its predecessor, but Jason Sawford, founder member and keyboard maestro of TAPFS doesn't think that at all.

"I personally think it's a great album," he says. "Obviously Dark Side is Pink Floyd's absolute masterpiece, Wish comes a close second."

With it being the 40th anniversary, will TAPFS be performing the whole of the album?

"Yes we are, as well as drawing heavily from Dark Side and The Division Bell. We'll also be touching on The Wall as well."

But we can hope for a few surprises too, right? "That's right," says Jason. "We may be doing a number in tribute to Syd Barrett, probably Astronomy Domine as it works very well in the set; and we may have a go at one of the songs from Endless River."

As well as faithfully recreating the sound of Pink Floyd (so much so that Floyd's drummer Nick Mason has gone on record saying that the Aussie outfit are probably better than Floyd ever was), the show boasts some of the best visuals in the business.

However, performing note-perfect recreations of known songs can be difficult Jason admits. "I've got to programme all the correct sounds into the keyboards and while I've done a lot of it in the past, it can still take weeks to do.

"We have to create the exact sounds and it sometimes depends on the piece of equipment we're using."

But is the band ever tempted to do a song a different way?

"Well, the music is always faithful to the albums, but Floyd used to improvise early on and we listen to all the various versions and we do make it sound like Floyd improvising, and not like another band.

"Finally, you have to have a certain mindset. For this music you have to be focused and disciplined – it's very much like being a classical musician."

The band has been performing the music of Pink Floyd for nearly 30 years now, does Jason still enjoy the job? "Well, it IS a job and I'm no longer a young man, but I still enjoy playing and of course it's great music to play – and there's the audience reaction which is always great."

And there could be more to come... "There's loads more I'd like to do from the Floyd catalogue," admits Jason. "The Obscured By Clouds album has some lovely songs. There's a lot of scope."

Words and interview by Martin Hutchinson.

Many Thanks Sara

Emma Johnson

Do you have many links with Cambridge?

Yes, I went to Pembroke College and I'm an Honorary Fellow so I come back quite often. I'm really looking forward to my visit next month – Cambridge feels like a second home to me.

What is your lingering impression of the city?

I studied English literature and loved it, but from an early stage it was clear that music was going to be my thing. For the second part of my degree they allowed me to change and study music. It was a wonderful time. It was good to be surrounded by so many people who were good at music and excited by it. In those days, that period just before everyone had mobile phones, if you wanted someone to come to your rehearsal, you had to cycle across the city and put a note on their door, so it helped keep you fit too!

What inspired you to play the clarinet?

I loved the sound of it. I was already obsessed by playing the recorder, which I'd had from about the age of 4, so when they offered clarinet lessons at my primary school I jumped at the chance. I love the fact that it's such a vocal instrument, it seems to sing. In many ways, playing the clarinet is similar to singing. When I feel an emotion whilst playing, I'm aware this communicates itself to the audience.

How do you manage to balance the demands of rehearsing, touring and recording with a personal life?

Music is a vocation so it does rather take over your life. But I'm very fortunate to have a lovely daughter and, naturally, she is my priority, so I would always put anything to do with her first. She wouldn't want me to stop playing music

World famous clarinettist Emma Johnson will perform alongside the acclaimed European Union Chamber Orchestra at Cambridge Corn Exchange as part of this year's Cambridge News-backed Cambridge Classical Concert Series. ANDREW BURTON spoke to her about studying in Cambridge and how music has taken over her life and the music itself benefits from me having a family.

What would you say to someone reading this who is thinking of coming along but isn't used to attending classical concerts?

Concerts are much less formal than they used to be. There aren't any 'rules' as far as I'm aware. It's a very appealing programme on March 5, opening with Holst's St Paul's Suite, and including Greig's Two Elegiac Melodies and Mozart's Symphony No. 33. And the Mozart Clarinet Concerto, which I will be playing, is such a delightful piece of music, a real masterpiece. So I would say come along and enjoy the music, whether you're old or young, a regular concert-goer or a first timer.

What else might you have done with your life if you had not become a clarinettist?

My other idea was to become a writer and was very supported by my English teacher at school. That's how I got into Cambridge to read English. Always at the back of my mind, I keep asking myself: 'When are you going to write that book you've never written?' But I never have time.

What important lessons has being a musician taught you?

One of the nice things about music is that if you really work hard at it and have your own take on it then I think you can get somewhere in music. It also teaches you to remain very humble the whole time because one moment the audience is applauding but the next minute you might find that your reed has died on you and it squeaks so you feel a bit of a fool. The reeds that we use in clarinets are just reeds that you would find growing beside a pond; there's nothing high tech about them, and they are prone to breaking now and again. So it really helps keep you humble.

If you could transport yourself back in time and be present at the premiere performance of any piece of classical music in history, which would you choose?

Definitely Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. It would be absolutely fascinating to see how Anton Stadler, for whom Mozart composed it, played it at that first public performance. Stadler was a friend of Mozart's, they were both Freemasons together, and he was said to be a 'happy go lucky' sort of chap and in fact a bit of a rogue. He often borrowed money from Mozart and he actually lost the original manuscript of the concerto so scholars have been a bit hard on him. The story was that he pawned it because he ran out of money but then it was never seen again. He must have been a lot of fun to be around and he certainly inspired Mozart to write a number of heavenly pieces such as the Clarinet Concerto I'll be playing in Cambridge with the European Union Chamber Orchestra.

Focus on your garden

EVER thought about how to capture frost-covered holly, close-ups of pretty petals or swathes of woodland bulbs in fading light?

If you've not had much success taking good pictures of your plants, eminent flower and plant photographer Clive Nicholls offers some useful pointers on how aspiring horticultural photographers can create pictures to frame proudly rather than instantly delete.

"If you're shooting outdoors, give yourself the best possible chance of success and select somewhere photogenic. The garden of a National Trust or English Heritage property would be a good place to start, or alternatively a well-maintained public or privately-owned garden," says Nicholls, who runs online courses on the subject.

"Of course, if you're lucky enough to have a wonderful garden of your own, start there."

The National Gardens Scheme (www.ngs.org.uk) has thousands of gardens that open nationwide to the public in all seasons, so check on your nearest open garden and go and visit – chat to the owners and they may well allow you to take some photographs.

Take note of the weather, he advises.

"Unless you want shots with subject movement, you should ideally shoot on a day when there's little wind."

One of the major mistakes that amateurs make when photographing plants and gardens is to shoot in bright sunlight.

"Although your brain is saying 'Wow, this garden looks amazing', your pictures will probably be disappointing because of dark inky shadows and bright, burnt-out highlights.

"Put simply, your pictures will probably be too contrasty. Shooting on overcast days with a bit of sunshine pushing through the clouds will undoubtedly yield better results as the soft, diffused light allows you to capture the subtle colour and texture of flowers and plants.

"Choosing the right time of day is also important. You can get good shots in the middle of the day, but I prefer to shoot with early morning or late afternoon light, when the sunlight is raking across gardens, throwing shadows which add three-dimensionality and depth to your photos.

For garden scenes, look for interesting features such as statues, topiary, fountains or sundials and shoot along pathways to lead the viewers' eyes into the photo, Nicholls advises.

"Combinations of colourful flowers in borders can be very photogenic, so using a zoom lens to fill the frame with flowers works well. Keep your composition simple and don't include anything that doesn't contribute to your composition.

"Things like plant labels or part of an ugly fence in the background can spoil a good picture. If you're shooting close-ups outdoors, select a specimen that's in good condition and isolate it against a plain, distraction-free background.

"You can of course create wonderful flower images by buying some attractive specimens from your local florist and photographing them indoors. I personally like to shoot them simply, using natural daylight from a nearby window. If one side of the subject is too dark, you can reflect light back onto it using a piece of white card."

You don't need a camera bag full of expensive equipment to shoot good horticultural photographs, he continues.

"It's best to keep things simple for wider garden scenes and take just one or two lenses – ideally a zoom and a wide-angle. If you want to get in really close to your subjects and fill the frame with a small part of a flower or plant, a macro lens is the answer."

Most gardens look at their most colourful, vibrant best in spring and summer, but Nicholls takes as many pictures in autumn and winter. Frost, snow and autumnal mists and fog add extra drama to your garden and plant photographs, so get up early to take some amazing photographs – ones that you will be proud to show to family and friends.

- Sackville House Stables
- Four bedroom house
- 29-box training yard

SACKVILLE House Stables is a traditional training yard at the foot of the famous Warren Hill Training Grounds in Newmarket, comprising a four bedroom trainer's house and 29-box yard, which is now on the market for £515,000.

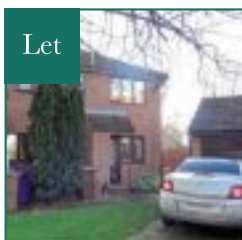

The Grade II listed yard is believed to be one of the older racing establishments in Newmarket, dating back to 1760, and has a house with accommodation including two reception rooms, a kitchen, utility room, large cellar and four bedrooms. It is of sufficient proportions to also incorporate the yard's office.

The yard comprises 29 boxes, storage, tack and feed room, as well as two spacious haylofts over two of the stable blocks with potential for conversion for further staff accommodation, subject to planning permission. A1 gets 3-cylinder TFSI

WEIGHING up the pros and cons of petrol and diesel power becomes a little harder for Audi A1 customers from today as a new super-frugal, 97g/km TFSI version of the three or five-door subcompact becomes available in the UK.

Equipped with a characterful new three-cylinder engine – the first petrol unit with this configuration ever to be installed in an Audi model – the latest A1 variant promises to bring 67mpg-plus economy, peppy performance and the premium hallmarks that distinguish every Audi within even easier reach with an OTR price starting from £14,315.

The 95PS turbocharged three-cylinder petrol engine effectively replaces the 89PS 1.2-litre four-cylinder engine available in the A1 since launch. It can call on a healthy 160Nm of torque to propel the A1 1.0 TFSI with standard five-speed manual gearbox to 62mph from rest in 10.9 seconds, regardless of whether it is powering the three-door or five-door Sportback body style. A seven-speed S tronic twin-clutch transmission is also available, and with this installed the acceleration time is also unchanged in both versions. Top speed is 116mph in every case.

Equally importantly, the new engine can return up to 67.3mpg in the A1 when linked to the standard manual gearbox, or 64.2mpg in conjunction with the S tronic transmission, equating to CO2 figures of 97g/km and 102g/km respectively. Again, these figures apply regardless of the body style chosen.

For comparison, the 1.6-litre TDI which retains its position as the most frugal option in the updated range now benefits from an economy boost from 74.3mpg to 80.7mpg according to the combined cycle test, and a CO2 reduction from 99g/km to 92g/km in both body styles.

£14k new Vitara

MORE than 25 years after the original model's debut, the all-new Vitara has smaller dimensions to meet contemporary needs and incorporates Suzuki's cutting-edge ALLGRIP four wheel drive system as an option.

The new Vitara is powered by the M16A 1.6-litre petrol engine or the D16AA 1.6-litre DDiS engine. For the diesel engine, a new EGR (Exhaust Gas Recirculation) system and an electronically controlled VGT (Variable Geometry Turbocharger) help achieve powerful, torquey performance.

Prices start at £13,999 for the 1.6 SZ4.

Citroen's new C4 is even smarter

LAUNCHED in 2010, with over 450,000 vehicles produced at the Mulhouse plant in France, the second-generation Citroën C4 is being updated in 2015 with a new light signature, new technologies and the latest-generation engines.

Setting the standard for comfort in its segment, the Citroën C4 is a compact hatchback with an elegant design, all-round comfort and outstanding driveability – all proof of Citroën's creativity and technological know-how.

The Citroën C4 New Range is available to order now, with first UK deliveries due in April.

Citroën C4 New Range updates include:

- A new light signature that makes the front end more expressive with LED running lights and a more dynamic touch to the rear with new 3D-effect tail lights.

- New upholstery materials and a simpler dashboard featuring a new centrally located 7-inch Touchscreen.

- Comfort is increased with standard-setting acoustic features, optional massaging front seats and a panoramic glass roof equipped with an electric blind. The Citroën C4 is also spacious thanks to its 2.61m wheelbase, split folding rear seats and a boot volume of 408 litres, which sets the standard in this segment.

- More useful technologies, with the introduction of hands-free keyless entry & start and a new seven-inch Touchscreen that groups all the media and navigation functions together. Features to simplify driving include Hill Start Assist, Intelligent Traction Control and a Blind Spot Monitoring system.

- Latest-generation engines that enhance driveability and reduce fuel consumption. The

SMART TECHNOLOGY: The new Citroën C4

3-cylinder PureTech petrol engines and BlueHDi Diesels all meet Euro 6 standards.

- The Citroën C4 New Range will also adopt the new trim level names: Touch, Feel and Flair.

Inside, the Citroën C4 New Range features a modern, uncluttered dashboard with a new 7-inch Touchscreen, which is available as an option on the Feel trim level and standard on Flair versions. Besides streamlining the dashboard visually, this new screen groups:

- The controls of a new Touchscreen navigation system that displays the map, speed limits, takes account of traffic conditions and suggests the most fuel-efficient route (option only).

Media technology includes radio, audio streaming and portable-device connectivity.

Telephone features include hands-free functionality via Bluetooth, directory access and double-call management.

Smart technologies that make driving easier and trouble-free include:

- Keyless entry & start allowing the vehicle to be unlocked and started while the electronic key remains in the driver's pocket (optional on Feel and Flair versions).

- Intelligent Traction Control (ITC) provides better grip on slippery surfaces by detecting conditions that make it difficult to start and move forward. In these situations, the ITC replaces the anti-slip regulation (ASR) and transfers the drive force to the wheel with the best grip, to maximise traction and keep the car moving in the right direction.

- Hill Start Assist is an electric parking brake that automatically holds the vehicle steady for two seconds to allow an easy start on gradients of over 3%.

- Front fog lights with static cornering function.

- An ultrasonic Blind Spot Monitoring System that warns the driver when a vehicle is in a blind spot, with an orange diode in the corner of the door mirrors. Consisting of four sensors in the front and rear bumpers, this system is activated at speeds between 10mph and 70mph.

The Citroën C4 New Range features new Euro 6-compliant engines that combine fuel efficiency with high standards of performance: there are two PureTech petrol engines and four BlueHDi Diesel engines.

Honda's HR-V is back!

THE Honda HR-V is back, 16 years after it more or less invented the 'crossover' body style, and almost a decade after it was taken out of production.

Honda knows it has to get back into the compact crossover market, and this is its weapon. It's said to be fun to drive, efficient and high-tech – but then that's the manufacturer talking.

Interested? Buyers can expect a seven-inch touch-screen on mid- and high-grade models, petrol and diesel engines, 'hidden' rear door handles to enhance a coupe-style look, and the same cleverly-folding 'Magic Seats' already seen in the Civic.

The 453-litre boot dwarfs those of some of the HR-V's rivals, while in a bold move it will use an Android operating system for its media interface. Functionality will mirror that of a typical Sony, Samsung or HTC smartphone so buyers will already know how to use it.

Honda will reveal the car in the flesh at the Geneva Motor Show in March.

For further details about the Honda range please call John Banks Honda on (01223) 656112 or go to johnbanks.co.uk.

A Masterful display from five-star Smith

JANE Smith collected five golds at the Sudbury Valentines Masters & Seniors Open, incorporating the Suffolk County ASA Masters & Seniors Championships.

The Newmarket Swimming Club member was in fine form in the masters (over-25s) category and she was joined at the top of the podium in the same class by clubmates Lisa Withers and Peter Winter, who both claimed four gold medals.

Withers also gained a personal best in the 100m individual medley.

In the seniors category (ages 16 to 24), Ellie Frost clinched a personal best in the 50m butterfly and she was among the team of Adam Kemp, Matt Reynolds, James Hood, Alyx Hatton and Livvii Curtin that came home with one gold, two silvers and eight bronze medals for Newmarket.

Etholle Marks and Tess Wesley swam impressively in the 800m freestyle, taking gold and silver medals respectfully for their age group.

Henry Newell and Thomas Allison swam the long course 1,500m freestyle for the second time. Newell matched his short course personal best of 20min 47.42secs, winning a silver medal in the process, and Thomas shaved an impressive 26 seconds off his PB, finishing in 20.15.63 to take fourth place.

A young team of Newmarket swimmers won the Valentine's Day Gala hosted by Mildenhall Swimming Club.

Following strong performances by the whole team, Newmarket finished with 137 points.

Mildenhall were next with 127, followed by First Strokes Godmanchester on 114.

Cockeril crowns for Newmarket

TRACY Cockeril scored Newmarket ladies' II's 100th goal of the East Women's League, Division 4NW(S) season as they blasted Huntingdon II 11-0.

Olivia Haste set Newmarket on their way by finishing off at the back post within four minutes, and another short corner saw Angel Fayers fire home.

Further goals from Cockeril and Cassie Aym's followed before a cross from Hannah Kelly pulled the keeper off her line to leave an open goal for Mel Podd to score.

Seconds before the end of the first half, Aym's slipped the ball to Beth Wombwell who fired the ball into the bottom of the goal to put Newmarket 6-0 up at the break.

Cockeril grabbed her second goal soon after the restart following good link-up play with Aym's and her hat-trick completed a century of goals this term for the team as she deflected the ball home from open play.

TON UP: Newmarket II made it 100 goals for the season with Clodie Rolph's cross finding Fayers, who passed the ball to Kelly to trick the keeper into diving the wrong way before netting.

Aym's finished the job by smashing home after a move from the back involving Holly Woods, Podd and Cockeril.

Newmarket ladies' first team went down 4-0 at Norwich City in Division 2NE.

Newmarket went 3-0 down in the first half and without any substitutes, they were forced to play with 10 players after Kerry Alderson suffered an ankle injury blocking a shot.

Despite that, they went close through Di Thomas, Calli Cannon, Donna Keates and Lydia Evans as they pushed for a goal in the second half only for Norwich to add another.

Newmarket men's II lost 3-1 to Ipswich East Suffolk in East Men's League, Division 4NE with Alex Andreou on target.

> Girls' football

BACK OF THE NET: Newmarket score a goal against Royston during their 5-0 win.

Sillitoe leads Jockeys to comfortable win

NEWMARKET under-16 girls enjoyed a 5-0 win over Royston and recorded their fourth successive clean sheet in the process.

Town struggled early on and it took a penalty save by Abi Smith in the Newmarket goal to spark them into life.

They went 1-0 up through Jordanne Sillitoe after Abbi Griffin's shot had been blocked.

Town made it 2-0 when Sillitoe dribbled past two players before firing into the corner.

Katie Webb made it 3-0 in the second half and a Sillitoe corner found Agnew on the edge of the box and she curled the ball home to make it 4-0.

Sillitoe then bagged her hat-trick after finishing off an excellent team move.

Greygoose proud of players after victory over Ely

DEAN Greygoose was full of praise for his players after seeing his Mildenhall Town team beat the Thurlow Nunn League, Premier Division's bottom club Ely City 2-0.

A heavy pitch at the Unwin Ground made playing conditions difficult for both sides, but it was Mildenhall who coped best, much to Greygoose's delight.

"It was a decent result and we deserved to win," he said.

"Both teams tried to play football which was surprising on that pitch. It was a credit to both sets of players that they tried to play.

"They probably edged the first 15 minutes and it took us a while to get going. But once we did, there was only going to be one winner."

Friday evening's match featured plenty of positives for the visitors, including a first goal for Matt Green.

He opened the scoring in the 35th minute with a fine volley and from that moment on Mildenhall never looked back.

"It was great to see Matt score his first goal for us," continued Greygoose.

"He's a holding midfielder but he's probably had as many shots as anyone else."

Victory was sealed just after the hour thanks to a Richard Logan free kick, and Mildenhall comfortably saw out the rest of the match.

"This was a possible banana skin for us, especially given the state of the pitch," said Greygoose.

"It wasn't a great game to watch but I felt we controlled it. I'm really pleased with how the back four held a good line and didn't make any mistakes.

"The attitude of the players was very good as well. Even at 2-0 up, they still kept going at them."

There was disappointment for Newmarket Town though, as they lost 1-0 at fourth from bottom Wivenhoe Town.

The Jockeys were looking to bounce back from a heavy 4-0 defeat at Stanway Rovers but it was not to be for Kevin Grainger's men.

Newmarket, who are now seventh in the table, will look to make amends when they entertain Gorleston this Saturday.

> Rugby union

Reeves in Newmarket points feast

MICHAEL Reeves scored a late try for Newmarket as they won 13-10 against Crusaders in Greene King IPA Eastern Counties One.

Two penalties from Reeves and one from Crusaders saw Newmarket lead 6-3 at half time.

After 20 minutes of the second half, Crusaders scored a converted try to lead 10-6.

But with two minutes remaining, Reeves crashed over under the posts and he also slotted through the conversion to complete the victory.

"It was a good win, probably one we didn't deserve, but we took them on well," said Newmarket director of rugby Gareth Godfrey, who praised another good performance from Max Bell.

"It was appalling conditions but we stuck at it and got there in the end."

"Crusaders gave away a lot of penalties which allowed us to stay in touch.

"The defence was very tight and they didn't create a great deal either, and our defence was the reason for that.

"Another week goes by where we patch the team up, make a lot of changes and come away with the win."

Wadham rules Reve out of Cheltenham Festival

LUCY Wadham is planning to save Le Reve for a tilt at the bet365 Gold Cup on the final day of the season at Sandown following his excellent effort in defeat in last Saturday's BetBright Chase at Kempton.

The seven-year-old finished a clear second behind the Paul Nicholls-trained Rocky Creek in the fiercely competitive handicap and although he holds an entry at the Cheltenham Festival, Newmarket-based Wadham is keen to give her charge a break having already run five times this season.

She said: "We were obviously really delighted with him. There is no disgrace in finishing second to

> Racing

Rocky Creek

"Although he handles soft ground, I think he did just struggle slightly in that gluey ground.

"He's not going to go to Cheltenham. He's had quite a busy season so the plan is to give him a bit of time and bring him back for the bet365 Gold Cup at Sandown."

■ Frankie Dettori will get the leg up on Toast Of New York for the first time in the next couple of weeks as Jamie Osborne begins to step up his stable star's preparations for the Dubai World Cup at the end of March.

The four-year-old was a stunning winner of the UAE Derby at Meydan last year and having come within a whisker of claiming victory in the Breeders' Cup Classic at Santa Anita last November, he will return to Dubai as a major contender for the world's richest race.

It was revealed in January that Sheikh Joaan Al Thani's Al Shaqab Racing empire had stepped in to buy the hugely valuable colt, meaning the owner's retained rider, Newmarket-based Dettori will take over in the saddle from Jamie Spencer.

The popular Italian will likely partner Toast Of New York for the first time in a racecourse gallop at Kempton early next month.

Osborne said: "He went to Kempton on Tuesday and worked well and he'll probably go back the week after next, but we'll talk to Frankie and see what fits in with him.

"We're very happy with the horse at home. We put him through a fairly high intensity regime when he's building up for a race and he's in the middle of that at the moment.

"He's cantering every day, he'll have a couple more gallops at home and we'll keep moving forward with him."

■ Last season's 2000 Guineas winner Night Of Thunder has been bought by Godolphin.

The four-year-old Dubawi colt will remain in training with Richard Hanon but will now race in the royal blue silks of Sheikh Mohammed's powerful operation.

Night Of Thunder was previously owned by Saeed Manana, for whom he was last seen finishing second in the QEII at Ascot last October.
